

Eli A. Wolff

Eli A. Wolff directs the Inclusive Sports Initiative at the Institute for Human Centered Design in Boston, MA, and is the co-director of the Royce Fellowship for Sport and Society at Brown University. From 2001 to 2010, Eli was the manager of research and advocacy at the Center for Sport in Society at Northeastern University. From 2003 to 2006, Eli led a global effort to include provisions addressing sport and recreation within the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. Eli organized the national disability sport organizations to support professional golfer Casey Martin in his successful case against the PGA before the U.S. Supreme Court, and he helped to establish the ESPY Award for Best Male and Female Athlete with a Disability. For the last 10 years, Eli has been a member of the United Nations International Working Group on Sport for Development and Peace and over the last several years he participated in the process to establish the International Day of Sport for Development and Peace (IDSDP) that was approved in 2013 by the United Nations General Assembly. Eli is on the Board of Directors for the United States Olympians and Paralympians Alumni Association as well as Partners for Youth with Disabilities. Eli is a graduate of Brown University and is currently pursuing his PhD through the German Sport University of Cologne. Eli was a member of the Varsity soccer team at Brown University and was a member of the United States Paralympic Soccer Team in the 1996 and 2004 Paralympic Games.